

wet

wet is a new collection of wall tiles from award winning designers Hemingway Design. Stunning wall tiles designed to make your home look great. Playing with your rubber duck in the bath, singing Jerusalem in the shower, cooking a cheese toastie on your Breville will all be so much more satisfying with the artistic backdrop of wet tiles. These large scale, versatile tiles, lend themselves to use in almost any room of the house, so give them a try in the living room as a bit of art or on your bed headboard. wet tiles are easy wipe and could transform your bedroom experience.

Let your creative juices flow (with a little help from our suggestions if you like): have fun playing with the scale of the circles with Hemp, from the large Quadrant through the medium circle of the insert to the smaller circles on the strips.

Or simply use the plain tile landscape set brickbond in a kitchen with the occasional insert for the hell of it.

Scribble, Ringo and Toothbrush lend themselves to use in panels and bands with the stronger tiles used for effect in combination with the white-on-white version.

Another way of doing this is to use a full wall of one colour with the white elsewhere.

Flower looks beautiful with the field tiles used in combinations, again as either bands or panels.

The strips have been designed to work across the ranges with the mosaic complementing the mink and black of Ringo, Scribble and Toothbrush. It also looks great with any of the white-on-white tiles.

The pink glass sets off the pink pattern on the Pink/Black Scribble perfectly.

But also looks stunning used with Flower or any of the other white tiles for a more feminine feel.

Or with one field tile used throughout for a more unified look.

get wet!

The other way to play with the look of the tiles is to change the direction they are fixed on the wall. Use them landscape or portrait and offset to create different effects.

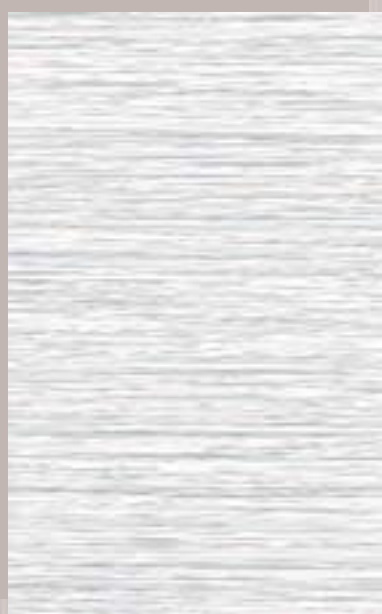

So make your home your own and have fun doing it!

HEMINGWAY DESIGN

Hemp

Cutting-edge design that allows you to experiment in creating patterns. The beige or grey tactile, textured field tiles can be used with the quadrant and single circle inserts and strips to create a circle design all over your bathroom or kitchen walls; the only limit is how creative you are.

Shells

Cover your bathroom walls with exquisite, glistening Shells tiles and instead of playing with your rubber duck drift off to palm-fringed white sandy beaches. The hardest part is deciding between a cocktail or a smoothie, sorry got carried away, between the cream or white field tiles, but of course you could just use both.

How to tile

Once you've chosen your tiling scheme, measure the area you want to tile and work out how much each separate tile will cover. The field tiles are all in packs of 1m², so just round up to the nearest square metre and buy that number of packs. But remember to allow at least 10% extra for cuts and wastage. The inserts are in packs of 4 – the coverage is shown on the packs.

You will need:

A Hemp Quadrant inserts	1.6m ²	4 packs
B Hemp inserts	0.5m ²	2 packs
	2.1m ²
	5.76m ²
	-2.1m ²
	3.66m ² + 10%
C Hemp field tiles	4.03m ²	4 packs
A Strips	1.9 linear m	2 packs

For example in the Hemp bathroom shown you have a wall that is 2.4m x 2.4m = 5.76m².

Now congratulate yourself on your maths prowess!

You will also need to buy edging strips for the edges of shelves, window ledges, or if you are tiling a bath surround.

Preparation for tiling

Before fixing your wall tiles it is important that you have a clean, dry, flat surface to work on. Remove all wall coverings, paint, old adhesives, grandma's chewing gum or other debris to ensure a sound base for tiling. The surface should be as flat as possible.

Setting out your tiles

Use a spirit level and baton to ensure a level base. Using a baton as a guide apply tiles from the centre of the wall out, resulting in the corner tiles being the same size; alternatively, if the corner is of visual importance, use the corner as a starting point and tile away from it. Leave an equal gap between tiles for grouting (3).

Cutting Guidelines

Straight cuts

Using a tile cutter, score the glazed side of the tile. Place the scored line over a matchstick keeping the glazed surface up. Press both sides firmly to ensure a clean break (1).

Round Cuts

Score the tile as above. Using a tile nibbler carefully break small sections away until required shape is achieved (2). To smooth rough edges use a tile file. Always file away from the glazed surface.

Fixing your tiles

Apply sufficient adhesive to the wall (4) with a suitable notched trowel (5) that will allow you to place the tiles whilst the adhesive is still fresh. To check the adhesive is still fresh, touch it with your fingers. If they come away clean the adhesive will need to be removed and reapplied.

Use tile spacers to ensure an equal joint between tiles (6). Allow the adhesive to dry, normally 24 hours before grouting, unless you are using a rapid setting adhesive.

Grouting the tiled surface

Mix your grout as specified by the manufacturer and apply with a grouting tool. Work the grout firmly into the joint diagonally across the tiles. Ensure that the grout fills the joint to the full depth. Remove excess grout with the grouting tool and finish the joint with a suitable wet sponge. Finally, polish with a clean dry cloth (7-8).

Movement joints

All corner joints and abutments to baths, shower trays, kitchen work tops, etc. should not be grouted but filled with silicone sealant, which will act as a flexible movement joint

Finally stand back, marvel at the wall, invite your friends round and show them your new Wet Tiles whilst impressing them with your grouting and tile nibbling skills.
